The Wider Curriculum

- Can you use colour and shape to create a self-portrait in the style of Picasso?
- Create a poster of animals and colours which you feel represent your emotions? What does it feel like when you're happy? What about sad?
- Find out about the habitats of one of the creatures in the story. How are they adapted to it?
- Can you create a colour chart of colours similar to the ones that paint companies would make? Can you find inventive names for your colour chart?
- Use your knowledge of French to label things with their colours. How many different colours can you label in your house?
- How would you create the characters from Inside Out? Would you choose the same colours for each emotion? What other emotions would you represent? What colour would they be?
- Listen to a range of songs with colours in the titles. Can you describe how they make you feel?
- Find the most common colours of flowers in your garden / around your local area. Pick one of the flowers and research it - why do they have vivid colours?
- Put food dye in water and place fresh cut flowers in them (roses / carnations work well). What happens to the petals?

Maths Ideas

- Daily sessions on Seesaw.
- TT Rockstars - 10 minutes a day.
- Tangrams - A tangram is an ancient Chinese puzzle where you make pictures using mathematical shapes. Follow the link to learn more: <https://nrich.maths.org/6715> Use this link to play with tangrams online <https://mathigon.org/tangram>
- Can you create a symmetrical mosaic using colours?
- What is the most common colour in your house? Make a tally chart and create a graph from it.

Literacy Ideas

- Pick a colour and write a performance poem about it. How can you describe the colour to convey the feeling behind it?
- Create a biography about the works of Dr Seuss.
- Can you create a diary entry about a day in lockdown? How can you use colour to convey how you felt?
- Listen to the song True Colours. Can you write an extra verse?
- Can you be inspired by the book and create similes and metaphors to describe how you are feeling? How many can you create?
- Write a description of the book which could be used to sell it in a shop or online. Who do you think it is aimed at? Why would somebody find it a useful read?
